WOLVES KEEP BOY IN TREE THREE DAYS

Safe in the Branches, He Sees Pack Devour a Large Bull Moose.

DULUTH, Minn., Nov. 27.—Frightened, weary, hungry and nearly naked, Oscar Pinord, 14 years old, of Duluth, stumbled into an Indian camp near Cloquet, and to an old squaw told a story of adventure that caused the red-skinned stoic to weep with sympathy.

The boy cried for water and food, and when these had been restored his strength he told of being chased by a moose, of watching from a treetop a pack of howling wolves tear the moose to pieces, of sleeping in the same tree top for three days and of wandering hopelessly about swamps, marshes and forests for a trail that would bring him back to Duluth.

This excitement was crowded into six long days. A week ago the boy, accompanied by Joseph Storms, left Duluth on a hunting trip. The hunters built a camp at Rice Lake, twenty-two miles west of Duluth, and Storms set about cooking the evening meal. Through the trees Pinord saw a rabbit and started in pursuit. The rabbit led the boy far into the woods. Twilight was fading. Soon night had come, and for hours Pinord roamed the woods, searching for the camp. He found himself in a swamp and decided to sleep in a tree.

In the morning he heard the howl of a bull moose in the distance and a moment afterward the howl of wolves. Soon the frantic moose and his cow came running through the swamp with the wolves following. The moose made for the boy, who got out of reach by climbing the tree, where he had found refuge in the night. Under the tree the pack caught the moose and tore him to pieces, while the shivering boy watched.

For the three days and nights Pinord was afraid to leave the tree except in day time, when he went a short distance for water. On the third day the howl of the timber wolves was no longer heard and the boy tried once more to find his way back to the camp.

It was the Indian camp that he discovered after a day's search. His clothing had been torn from him. Even his shoes were gone. The old squaw gave him clothing and he started home.

Monkey

Frightens Boy, and Suit is Instituted against Owner of the Animal.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27.—As the aftermath of an incident several months ago, when "Charlie Fuller," a chimpanzee, entered the O. P. Lindley home and is said to have terrorized the family, a $15,000 suit was filed here on behalf of Milton Lindley, 10 years old, who, it is claimed, was so frightened by the monkey that he has not had a full night's sleep since the occasion.

The suit is against E. W. Knowlton, owner of the chimpanzee. It is charged that the animal entered the house through a window and tried to take Mrs. Lindley's baby from her arms. The complaint says that Milton has never recovered from the fright and every night in his imagination demons of the jungle surround his bed.

MISSIS TURNIP.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Jean Bodini, a juggler and actor from Gloversville, N. Y., tried to catch with a fork held in his mouth, a turnip dropped from the top of a twelve story building, and as a result had to seek the services of a dentist. His upper front teeth were loosened by the shock.

The electric radiator consists of big tubular glowing electric lamps mounted in a metal radiator. It is light to carry and can be used anywhere in the house. It is turned on and off with a twist of a switch, and it is always ready with a strong, ruddy, healthful heat. It keeps a room warm without consuming any of the oxygen or taking the "life" out of the air.

PENSION ASKED

By Pioneer Settler, Who Discovered Finlayson River in Washington.

SEATTLE, Nov. 27.—John Finlayson, aged 103, discoverer of Finlayson river and Finlayson lake, in Yukon territory, has applied to the board of trustees of the Pioneer's home at Sitka, Alaska, for a pension under the Alaska territorial law providing for aged pioneers.

Finlayson prospected and mined gold in California and Oregon until he was 66 years old; then went to British Columbia and Yukon territory and explored large areas into which white men had never penetrated.

He retired with what he supposed would be enough money to care for him all his life, but had not expected to attain such a great age, and the years have now exhausted his hoard.

MORAL FORCE

Stronger Than Physical Force, Says Head of London's Women Police.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.) LONDON, Nov. 27.—"After a year's work, although we have had policemen serving in the roughest sections of London, we have always found moral force stronger than physical force," declares Miss Damar Dawson, head of the women police, in her first annual report. "The courts have already recognized the usefulness of the women police especially in the work of the children's courts," continued Miss Dawson, "and women in uniform have been particularly useful in patrolling the parks, which in big towns are often danger spots for women and children."

"The policemen are trained in signalling, first aid, drilling and in the elements of civil and criminal law."
